Course Information

Course Description: This seminar series will focus on the ethical issues that arise when caring for vulnerable populations such as persons with mental health diagnoses and children. We will explore decision making capacity and rights, standards of surrogate decision making, and how to protect the rights of those who lack the capacity, even if temporarily, to make decisions for themselves.

Learning Objectives for webinar on December 3, 2019:

At the conclusion of the conference, participants should be able to:

- discuss mental health advance directives;
- describe patients for whom mental health advance directives (MHADs) may be appropriate; and
- facilitate the completion of MHADs so that they reflect the values and treatment preferences of persons with mental health diagnoses.

Learning Objectives for webinar on March 5, 2020:

At the conclusion of the conference, participants should be able to:

- identify ethical issues unique to pediatrics;
- explain the best interest standard of surrogate decision making; and
- describe how the best interests of the child may consider how decisions impact family and loved ones.

Target Audience: This conference is appropriate for physicians, psychologists, nurses, social workers, administrators, clergy, attorneys, and ethics committee members who serve on institutional ethics committees and wish to expand their knowledge of ethical and legal issues in health care ethics consultation.
